THE GOLDEN HORIZON

Cyril
Connolly

WEIDENFELD
& NICOLSON

THE GOLDEN HORIZON

Edited by CYRIL
CONNOLLY

THE GOLDEN HORIZON

Edited by Cyril Connolly

Recommended by the Book Society

Cyril Connolly, the editor of Horizon, here sets out to compress into some six hundred pages the essence of the hundred and twenty numbers of his magazine which ran from December 1939 to January 1950. The book is divided into five sections: Horizon's History of the War, a montage of poems and eye-witness accounts which takes the reader through all the moods of the struggle by an impressionistic method; Entertainments, which includes parodies, extravaganzas and a dozen fine short stories; Glimpses of Greatness, in which reminiscences of bygone writers, composers and painters from Tolstoy to Sickert are assembled; Personal Anthology, the editor's twenty-four favourite poems from the magazine; and, lastly, Prospect of Literature, ten critical essays from Sir Maurice Bowra on Horace to Edouard Roditi on Italo Svevo. The Golden Horizon contains every variety of work by famous and unknown writers, old and young, united only by their excellence, and should constitute a permanent bedside book for all lovers of literature.

25s. net

IDEAS AND PLACES

BY CYRIL CONNOLLY

Recommended by the Book Society

Mr. Connolly has here grouped together his Comments from Horizon, which he so brilliantly edited from 1940 to 1950.

'Mr. Connolly is above all a man of letters, a craftsman who loves our delicate, sensitive language and uses it with a wonderful eye for its capacities.'
—SIR MAURICE BOWRA, Sunday Times

'Mr. Connolly is extravagantly gifted.'—
V. S. PRITCHETT, New Statesman

'Brilliant'—
ELIZABETH BOWEN, Spectator

'These comments will survive into literary history.'—
ALAN ROSS, Time & Tide

'He is a wit and the best living parodist.'—
GEORGE MALCOLM THOMSON, Evening Standard

Second Impression

16s. net

THE PLEASURE OF RUINS

by Rose Macaulay

25s.

Miss Macaulay has searched the abundant memory of her own travels, literature and art, to illustrate the pleasure which she and others have gained from visiting and exploring the ruins of the past. Palaces, temples, houses, fortresses, castles, cities, and even the artificial 'follies' of the last century, all come within the scope of the book, provided only that they are sufficiently ruinous to qualify for inclusion.

All periods of history, and almost all the countries of the world, contribute their quota. The Great Wall of China, the border castles of Wales and Scotland, the jungle-grown palaces of Mayas and Aztecs, Greek temples sunk beneath Italian seas and the huge Crusader castles of the Middle East—all these and many others find their place in this entrancing book.

No such book has ever been attempted before, and no author could have been found more suited than Miss Macaulay to pioneer in this neglected field. The years which she has spent in accumulating material, and in visiting or revisiting the sites which she describes, have resulted in a book which will give the lasting pleasure promised in its title.

It is fully illustrated, in part by original photographs, and in part by reproduction of drawings and paintings of ruins seen through the eyes of artists and travellers in the past.

THE GOLDEN HORIZON

Cyril Connolly

WEIDENFELD & NICOLSON